

A diagram illustrating the state of stress at a point within the Earth. The central region is labeled "Earth". A large horizontal arrow points to the right from the center, representing the applied shear force. Numerous black arrows radiate from the central point in various directions, representing the resulting stress vectors. These vectors are concentrated near the surface and become more numerous and smaller as they approach the center, indicating a stress concentration effect.

Earth